Mesers, J. M. & R. Coben Mysterlously

Disappear. Last week persons passing by the store of J. M. & R. Cohen, payabrokers, on Pennsylvania avenue, between Eleventh and Twelfth streets, noticed that everything moveable had disappeared. Inquirers were told that the firm had moved to the old stand, 1007 Seventh street northwest. A representative of THE REPUBLICAN, having a bill of $15 to collect, and not liking the looks of things, concluded to follow the firm to their new location. When he arrived at 1007 Seventh street his suspicions were more than con-firmed, as it was ascertained that a bill of sale had been made to the mother of the two Cohens wanted, and none of the family would disclose their whereabouts. There is a certain amount of mystery about the affair, which fustifies the conclusion arrived at by many that these two worthies have jumped the town. It is not known what amounts they owe here, but it is reported that our aged evening contemporary is isone. This arrangement will give those who desire to mourn the loss of upward of $200.

EARLY AND HIS RAID.

WHY HE DID NOT ENTER WASHINGTON An Interesting Talk With a Maryland Farmer Who

Was Acquainted With the Confederate Leaders-Gen. Breckenridge's Desire to Come In.

pecial Correspondence of THE REPUBLICAN. MONTGOMERY COUNTY, MD., Aug. 28 .-After viewing some of the remnins of the earth-works north of the city of Washington, which were constructed for its defense, and which formed a part of the chain of earth forts built on the bills encircling the city, nearly on the old boundary of the District of Columbia, and on the right and left anks of the Potomac, we struck off and went up the Rockville turnpike. Stopping at a farm house for a drink, we partook of cool, refreshing butter-milk, courteously profived. We were soon engaged in a talk with an

AFFABLE AND INTELLIGENT PARMER regarding the surrounding country and war times "May I ask if you resided here at the time of the rebel raid under Early?"

"Yes, sir: I lived here in 1864, when the confederate army, commanded by General Jubal A. Early, raided through Maryland and down the north side of the District of Columbia; in fact, I have lived in Montgomery County nearly all my life," said the farmer.

"Did you read Early's letter, printed in The Na-THONAL REPUBLICAN OF August 4, in regard to that rebel raid?" Yes, sir; and I think he is generally correct in his statement as to his movements as I recollect them; as to the numbers of the forces on each dam, N. Y. side I am not so good a judge."

"Could and did you freely mingle with the invad-

I knew General Breckinridge (the former Vice-President of the United States), Bradley T. Johnson (the Baltimore lawyer), and many others,"
"Did they talk of capturing Washington, or were there any propositions to do so?"
"Yes, sir; General Breckinridge, second in command of the raiding forces, immediately after the rebel army reached the Seventh street road urged

Early to march his army into Washington and take possession of the Capital, for its effect abroad would be to induce foreign governments to recognize the confederate States' independence " How did General Breckinridge think it could Breckinridge said their forces could move down Rock Creek Valley without being reached effectively by the guns in Forts Stevens and be Russey, and the small battery between those forts could be quickly disposed of. Or, by assaulting Fort Stevens, they could go into Washington by the Seventh street road. Knowing all the approaches to the Capital so well-as did very many other officers-Breckinridge had no doubt of sucas the men were from the long march from the Monoency, where they fought and whipped Gen-eral Lew Wallace on Sunday."

"And what response to these propositions for the capture of the Capital did General Early make?"

"He replied that he was not ordered North for told Breckinridge that he could easily ake his army into Washington, but that the debauchery that was sure to follow such success would so demoralize the confederate troops that all h—— could not get his army out of Washington, and consequently it could not escape capture by the Yankees." You speak so clearly of the sayings of the con-derate generals, Mr. Farmer, be kind enough to tell me if you were on such terms, then or prior thereto, as permitted personal intercourse with them. Will you relate the substance of what passed between them in your presence on that occasion?"

"Why did Early and Breekinridge burn the venerable Frank P. Blair's mansion, at Silver Springs, during that raid, Mr. Farmer ?"
"I am very glad that you have asked me that question, sir. It is strange that people do not yet un-derstand the truth of that matter. The confeder-ate generals did not allow property of non-con-batants to be destroyed. Old Mr. Blair and his family left their home Sunday evening and went into Washington, leaving his house (as well as that of Judge Montgomery Blair) in charge of servants. At this time Lieutenant shepard was mortally wounded, take prisoner, and afterward carried into one of the city military hospitals, where, I believe, he died. This is the truth in re-gard to the burning of Judge Blair's house. The reumstances were related by Lieutenant Shepard bimself while he lay in the temporary field hos-pital at Sigo village," said the farmer. "THE BLAIRS ABANDONED SILVER SPRINGS on Sunday evening, upon learning of the approach of the raiders."

"The Blairs would have been a rich take for Early, would they not, both being so conspicuous— Judge Blair having been a member of President Lincoln's Cabinet, and his father, Mr. F. P. Blair, he great editor and adviser of Presidents, whose other son was the distinguished Union general, Frank P. Blair, jr. ? They would have been important hostages for the rebels to use in demanding equally inportant exchanges for their ransom, would they not?"

"There you are mistaken," said the farmer. "Early would not have molested either of them; they were private citizens. They would have been protected and guarded from harm, as their property was guarded while the raiders remained at Silver Springs, by order of General Breckinridge, who was a kinsman of the Blairs."—John Y. Elnom,

Had 'Em Bad.

The peace and quietness of the Sabbath stillness was rudely broken between nine and ten p. m. by the sound of a pistol discharged twice in rapid succession. Several bold young men from a boarding-house near the corner of I and Sixteenth streets, followed by the ladies of the house, who were too frightened to be left alone without their natural protectors, trooped down I street in the direction from whence the shots had come. It was found that a colored man having charge of Congressman MeLaue's house had been eating cucumbers and watermelon for supper, and that he had "got em bad," and, faneying ne heard robbers, fired at the imaginary intruders. The gal-lant band, having now been reinforced by a policeman, searched the house, and, not finding anything bigger than a mouse on which to show their valor, wended their way homeward.

JOHN ANDERSON'S LECTURE.

Artistic Tailoring-Fitting Upon Anatomical and Geometrical Principles.

Professor John Anderson, of Edinburgh, Scotland, the artistic manipulator of the shears, gave a lecture at Tailmadge Hall last night his father's. It was a large two-story concrete-wall house. The evening that Early's army retreated Lieutenant Shepard, of a Georgia regiment (and a resident of Jacksonville, Fin.), had charge of the rear guard, in front of Silver Springs, with orders to make all the noise possible to divert the attention of the Yankee forces, so that Early's army could escape unmolested and unobserved in the night. Shepard's command was in the woods army could escape unmolested and unobserved in the night. Shepard's command was in the woods who were masters of the art. Producing a numnear Judge Montgomery Blair's. Beyond this ber of charts and patterns the Professor proceeded piece of woods was an open field of ten acres, then to demonstrate the manifold advantages of cutting a coat by anatomical principles, and showed how, when this was departed from, the garment was liable to display such eccentricities as climbing up the wearer's back until it pushed off his hat, and ornamented the back of his neck with two buttons that are usually intended to adorn the vicinity of the kid-neys. Throughout his discourse the lecturer dealt in such technicalities as led THE REPUBLICAN'S representative to regret that he had not "served a term as an articled clerk" with Harry Barror some other of our leading tailors, so that all this might be crystallized for the benefit of the many artists in cloth who subscribe for The REPUBLICAN. "Twas a vain wish, however, and the intelligent patrons of this able journal will be forced to regret that they did not attend in per-son to hear the "carny Scots" theory of deltoid measurements, and the dividing up of the corpus of man into eight distinct parts, each of which bore a geometrical relation to the first measurements. During the course of his remarks the lecturer paid a glowing tribute to Presi dent Garfield, and expressed an earnest wish that he might be raised up to health. At the conclu-sion of his lecture Professor Anderson left for New

Detroit,

In this connection it may be well to suggest to our boating friends that if the proper effort is nade it is believed that the contest between Haulan and Ross can take place upon the Potomac. No better course can be found anywhere than upon our own river, and the champion has already sted his powers here and expressed himself a highly satisfied with it. If the race could be ar-ranged so as to take place some time during the Yorktown celebration it would attract to the city thousands of people, even more than those who came to witness the Haulan-Courtney flasco. This is a matter worth considering, and it is hoped that our boat clubs may take it up in earnest.

THE COURSE CHANGED. It is understood that the project of building a grand stand at Easby's Point has been abandoned. and further that it has been decided to change the course of the race so that it shall be farther up the river. This action is in accordance with the sugrestions of THE REPUBLICAN, which early poin out the disadvantage in locating the grand stand at Easby's Point and of having the course extend from that point down the river or rather from a mile and a half below Easby's up to that point. By moving the course up the river the crowds that the event will draw to the city can have an opportunity of wit-nessing all the races, and the various boat clubs will be enabled to entertain their friends in their own boat-houses. It is gratifying to know that the suggestions of THE REPUBLICAN in this respect have been heeded. There will be no postponement of the regatta unless some new complication should arise in the President's case, which a present does not seem likely.

Obio's Handsome Statesman. Hon. Ben. Le Fevre, the distinguished Democratic Congressman from the Fifth Onio District, is in the city. Ben. is one of the most vigilant and enterprising statesmen in the House and it is really a pliy that he belongs to the Bourbon party. There is hope for him yet, however. General Le Fevre was the chairman of the House special committee charged with inan of the Inoise special committee charged with the investigation of the Agricultural Department last winter. His report, which was published at the conclusion of the investigation, was a model of neatness and brevity, and showed conclusively that the Agricultural Department under Le Due was not run in the interest of the farmers, but to decelor the and sarphyra at a dollar a round or develop tea and sorghum at a dollar a pound o

It will be in order to shoot reed birds Thursday next. These birds have made their appearance in large numbers in the marshes around the city. THE DISTRICT COMMISSIONERS.

Current Transactions in the Various Distriet Offices, Mr. M. R. Grevy, No. 1209 Tenth street northwest, having complained to the Commission-ers as to the time and manner of collecting streetsweepings, he has been informed that by the term of the contract the streets must be swept between the bours of six p. m. and six a. m., and that it is impossible to take up the sweepings without noise. The Health Officer has called the attention of the Commissioners to a number of obstructed sewertraps, stagnant water in gutters, and deposits of street-sweepings in the northwestern section of the city, and the subject has been referred to the En-Building permits have been granted to Grace M. E. Church, S street, between Eighth and Ninth streets northwest, for a two-story brick parsonage, 82,500; Otto L. Wolfsteiner, Maine avenue, between 75.7.00; Otto L. Wolfsteiner, Maine avenue, between Third and Four-and-a-halfstreets southwest, three two-story brick dwellings, $4,800; George Shepherd L street, between Twelfin and Thirteenth streets southeast, one-story brick dwelling, $200, and Mary Knox, 507 L street southwest, repairs to dwelling, $10.

has been granted a permit for a busil-meeting, to begin September 4 and continue eight days, the proceeds to be applied to liquidating a debt on the wood, regarding an insufficient supply of water on Capitol Hill, the Commissioners state there are but two remedies for the evil complained of—one to restrict the use of water, which requires metres and an expensive and disagreeable system of es-pionage, and the other to bring in an additional supply from the unlimited source at command. The latter method has been repeatedly urged and detailed plans and estimates submitted to Congress. The temporizing policy of robbing one sec-tion to supply another can go no further, for all sections above a moderate elevation are suffering alike. If all of the water necessarily used for irri-gation and simflar purposes was consumed during the night it is probable that an increase of pressure might be gained. This might be effected by consultation with the proper authorities. The Commissioners have approved the request of the trustees of the Reform School to be allowed fifty cart loads of cobble-stones belonging to the District, to be used on walks and gutters in the grounds belonging to the school. General E. W. Whitaker has been informed that the action taken a few days ago by the Health Officer in regard to the asphalt works corner North Capitol and K streets will cover the complaint in relation to the ammonia works at Easty's wharf and Twonty-seventh and H streets northwest. The Commissioners have under consideration a plan for changing the nomenclature of a number of streets and alleys in the District not already suitably designated.
